SAND SCULPTURES

I Tottori is a small city in Japan. This summer it is celebrating the 10th anniversary of its Sand Sculpture Event. At this event, artists from different countries make large sculptures from the mountains of sand near the city. Each year, the focus of the event is on a different part of the world.

II This year the focus is on the United States. The artists will make sculptures of famous American people and places. They use only sand and water to create their works of art. They will need about 3,000 tons of sand. Every year, the city saves the sand from the sculptures for the next event.

III In the past, not many tourists traveled to Tottori. To attract more visitors, the people of the city wanted to organize an event. They decided to use the only thing they had lots of — sand. There are 17 kilometers of sand dunes near the city. So, they invited artists from all over the world to build sand sculptures.

IV For the first few years, the artists built their sculptures outside. However, these sculptures lasted less than two months because of the wind and rain. That is why the city built a museum. Inside the museum, the sculptures last eight months. So now, visitors can enjoy the sculptures for a longer time. Today, about 500,000 people visit the museum each year. Some people return every year to see the new sculptures.

V The city is also popular with the sand sculpture artists. Many artists from around the world come to Tottori each spring. They spend a few weeks working on their creations. Jon Woodworth is a sculptor who is participating in the event for the first time this year. "There's no place like this in the world," he says.
